

RATIONALITY

Is it rational for men to believe
In the dead rising from the grave
Is it rational to believe
It is impossible for men to behave

If rational thinking concludes
To blame evil on something else
Is it rational to think a savior
Can then save me from myself

If it's rational to seek the truth
With explanations so obscure
Is it rational to go in search
Of The truth that's already here

If its rational for men to hope
For the promise of immortality
Is it rational to believe that cults
Have no abnormality

If its rational to believe heaven
Is some where high in the sky
Is it rational for men to believe
There is such a thing called a lie

In the mind of a rational man
All hearsay is nonadmissible
Truth at worse is acceptable
Nonsense at best impossible

That which a man witnesses
He can only confess
A rational man thinking
Will not settle for anything less.
